

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
Preface
Moving From Being Nice to Being Genuine	1
Introduction	7
Chapter 1
Why We Are Alienated From Ourselves	13
Preamble	13
1. Intellect (or observation)	15
2. Feelings	19
3. Needs (or values)	26
4. The Request (or concrete and negotiable action)	37
Chapter 2
Becoming Aware of What We Are
Truly Experiencing	47
Wearing Oneself Out Doing Good	47
Observing Without Judging or Interpreting	54
Feeling Without Judging or Interpreting	69
Identifying Our Needs Without Projecting Them
Onto Others	80
Formulating a Concrete, Realistic, Positive, Negotiable Request	98

Chapter 3

Becoming Aware of What Others Are Truly Experiencing	105
Communicating Is Expressing and Receiving Messages	105
Listening Without Judging	115
Empathy: Being Present With Oneself and Others	129

Chapter 4

Creating a Space to Connect	155
Heads Together	156
Facing the Façade	158
All Wells End Well	159
Dancing Gently Toward Each Other	160
Cherishing a Relationship	161
Talking Places	164

Chapter 5

Emotional Security and Meaning: Two Keys to Peace	167
I Love You as Long as	167
Off With the Masks!	181
Beyond the No, What Are We Saying Yes to?	188

Chapter 6

Sharing Information and Our Values	199
Absolute Thinking	199
Breakwater or Beacon, Barbed Wire or Shepherd?	209
Meaningfulness and Freedom	219
What About the Use of Force and Punishment?	220
Celebrating the Intensity of Life	225

Chapter 7
Method	231
Three Minutes, Three Times a Day	231
Healthy Consciousness	233
Convivial Consciousness	234
Epilogue
Cultivating Peace	237
Violence Is Not Natural	237
Violence, an Old Habit	238
Cultivating Peace	240
Footnotes	241
Bibliography	243
Index	245
The Four-Part Nonviolent Communication Process	253
Some Basic Feelings and Needs We All Have	254
About Nonviolent Communication	255
About PuddleDancer Press	256
About the Center for Nonviolent Communication	257
Trade Books From PuddleDancer Press	258
Trade Booklets From PuddleDancer Press	264
About the Author	266